CHAPTER 4

DUAL ASTRONOMY

The Foundations of Heaven

"Then the earth shook and trembled; the foundations of heaven moved and shook, because he was wroth. "

2 Samuel 22 : 8

"Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken:... "

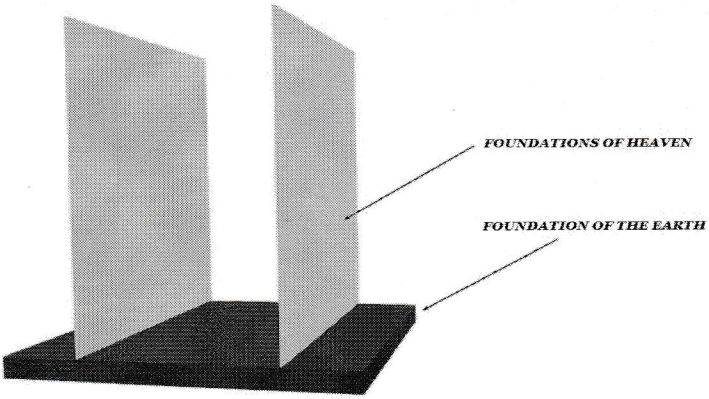
Matthew 24 : 29

The Foundation of Heaven represent two walls located along the latitudes 90° in the North and in the South. One of the functions of the Foundations of Heaven is to support the heavens and the Earth by creating horizontal layers between them, which serve as platforms. The universe is divided into more than ten sections, including the Earth, which rests upon one of the platforms.



Picture 1 : foundation of heaven upon the foundations of the earth

"They placed me on the first heaven and they showed me a vast ocean, much bigger than the earthly ocean."

The Second Book Of Enoch

"And on the tenth heaven, Avaroth, I saw the view of the face of the Lord.."

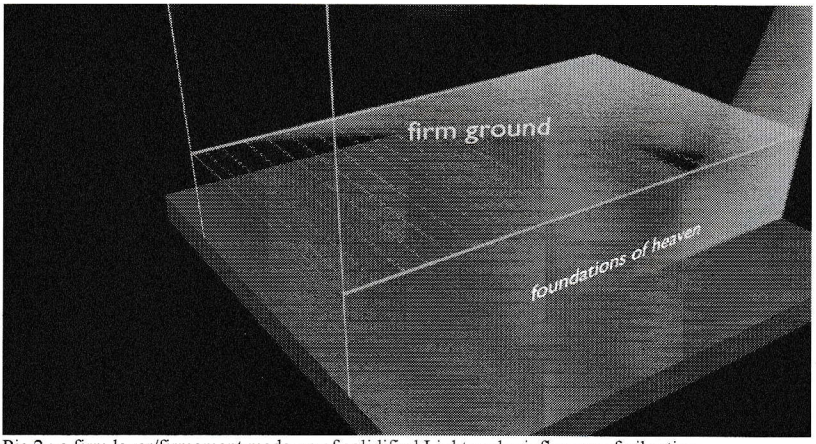
The Second Book Of Enoch

According to scripture, there are ten heavens above the Earth. The firmament which divides the waters can be described as a "shelf" which holds the ocean above the Earth. Contrary to the conventional circular flat Earth beliefs, with the firmament being a dome, the actual firmament that divides the waters is below the heavenly bodies, not above them. The waters above are also the cause for the coloring of the sky. All known colors of the sky is a result of the refraction of light caused by the waters in the first heaven.

The Firmaments or "Shelves"



Pic.2 : a firm layer/firmament made up of solidified Light under influence of vibration

In order to understand how these "shelves" are created, let's recall the domains of the elements and their property to contract and release geometric atoms. The Foundations of Heaven are complex and multi-functional devices. One of their functions is to create flat, horizontal layers of vibration between them. As we already know, vibration causes a contraction within the domain. The firmaments are most likely to be made up of the element Lightning. The vibration provided by the foundations causes the domain of Lightning to contract and release Lightning-atoms along these layers. These Lightning-atoms make up the "firmaments" supporting the heavens and the Earth.

"When He made firm the skies above, When the springs of the deep became fixed, ..."

Proverbs 8 : 28

„Hast thou with him spread out the sky, which is strong, and as a molten looking glass?"

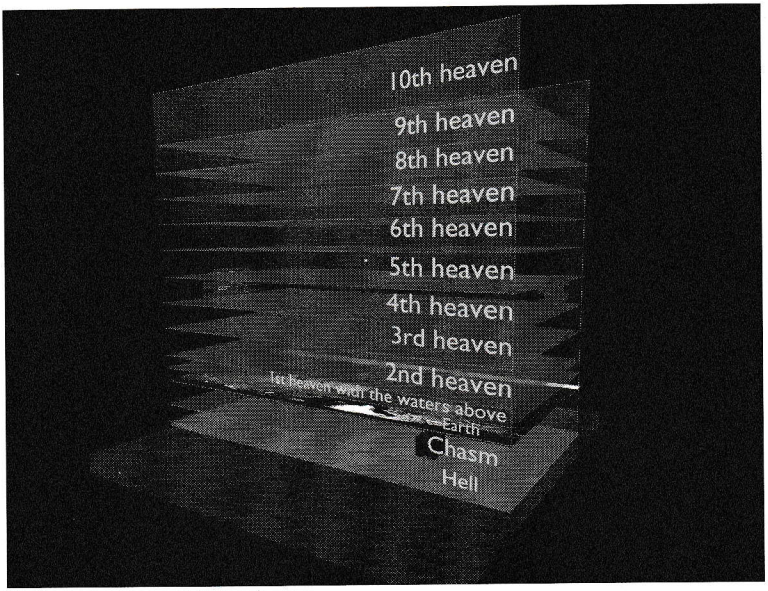
Job 37 : 18



Pic.3 : the heavens and the earth

Technically, a firmament can be as firm as glass, provided that the vibration is strong enough. If we think of vibration in terms of frequency and intensity, it can be compared to a music tone - for example, one and the same tone can be played at a different volume; it can be played loud, and it can be played faint. The solidity of the firmaments is determined by the "volume" of the vibration - the stronger/louder the vibration, the more it causes the aether, and the fiber of the domain to contract; the more the fiber contracts, the more particles it releases; the more particles it releases, the more dense and solid the firmament gets. Job 37 : 18 refers to the firmament above being as solid as molten glass, which indicates a layer with a strong/loud vibration. Note that this is not referred to the firmament which divides the waters. The firmament referred to in Job 37 : 18 is the layer dividing the heavens 7 and 8; the firmament diving the waters is the first layer above Earth, as depicted in picture 3.

The Heavens and the Earth

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth..."

Genesis 1 : 1

The heavens and the Earth are fastened on the platforms created by the Foundations of Heaven. There are ten layers above the Earth, and two layers below the Earth. The layers above the Earth are the ten heavens. The layers below are also known as Chasm and Hell. The christian term Hell is not referred to the layer in general , but to an enclosed section situated within the lowest layer called Hell. The technical term for the two layers beneath the Earth is Chasm and Hell. The Earth is situated relatively low, between second lowest layer and the first heaven. The 10th heaven is the dwelling place of God. The Kingdom of Heaven is situated on the platforms 8, 9, and 10. Note that the physical Kingdom of Heaven is not to be confused with the spiritual:

"Jesus said, "If those who lead you say to you, 'See, the kingdom is in the sky,' then the birds of the sky will precede you. If they say to you, 'It is in the sea,' then the fish will precede you. Rather, the kingdom is inside of you, and it is outside of you*."*

The Gospel Of Thomas 3

The physical Kingdom of Heaven is inseparable from the spiritual Kingdom which is already present on Earth. The spiritual Kingdom is an information field above the Earth which was established by Christ. People who accept Christs sacrifice become part of the spiritual, as well as of physical Kingdom.

His disciples said to him, "When will the kingdom come?"."It will not come by waiting for it. It will not be a matter of saying 'here it is' or 'there it is.' Rather, the kingdom of the father is spread out upon the earth, and men do not see it."

The Gospel Of Thomas 113

The heaven 1-7 contain all kinds of angels. The 4th heaven contains the luminaries Sun, Moon, and planets. All of the mentioned luminaries run in a straight line from east to west, in repetitive motion.

The Winds of Heaven

The Winds of Heaven is a term which describes vibration. Vibration is known to have attracting and repelling qualities. Aside from attracting and repelling, the ancient term "winds" is also used to describe the vibration which creates solid layers, or firmaments, by causing the fabric of the Light-domain to contract and release particles.

"I saw the treasuries of all the winds*: I saw how He had furnished with them the whole creation and the* firm foundations of the earth*." 18 : 1 -2*

Pic.4

Picture 4 illustrates the four winds which bear the whole creation. Each wind is a section in the Foundation of Heaven. Each of the four sections provides a horizontal layer of vibration thus creating firm layers to support the Earth, the heavens, and the waters above. All four sections form a single, continuous layer. This applies to all layers, for each "firmament" is made up of four "winds" (wind means vibration). It is to be added that each of the four winds may be subdivided in smaller sections, which is not illustrated.

Picture 5: A close up view of the firmament and of the Earth. The Earth is resting upon the four winds.

"I saw the four winds which bear the earth and the firmament of the heaven*."* - The Book Of Enoch 18 : 2 – 3

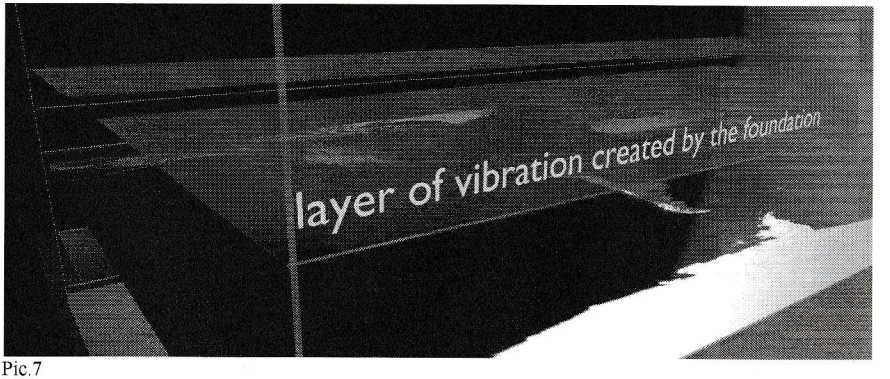
Pic.6

The verse above states that the four winds bear the Earth, as well as the firmament of heaven. Picture 6: the Earth rests upon a firm layer / firmament created by the winds of heaven. The Book Of Enoch could not be more accurate.



Pic.7

" And I saw how the winds stretch out the vaults of heaven, and have their station between heaven and earth: these are the pillars of the heaven. "

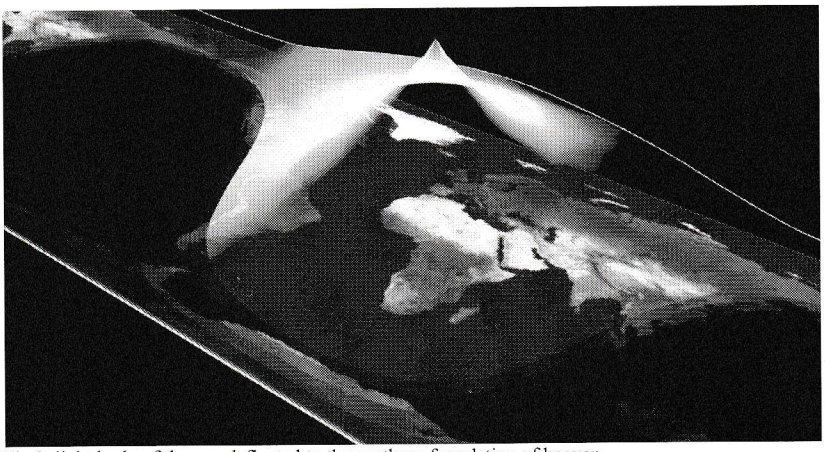
The Book Of Enoch 18 : 3

This verse above once more empathizes that the layers of heaven are being stretched out / created by the winds / vibration. What's more, it clearly says that the winds are created by the Foundations of Heaven.

Foundations of Heaven and Circular Motion of the Luminaries



Pic.8: light body of the sun deflected to the northern foundation of heaven

The light bodies on Earth are drawn to the Pillars of Earth below. The light bodies of Sun, Moon, planets, and stars are deflected sideways to the Foundations of Heaven in addition to the deflection downwards. One of the functions of the foundations is to draw the light bodies of the luminaries and of stars sideways thereby making them appear to be revolving. An observer down on Earth does not perceive the physical motion of the Sun, which is straight; instead, the way we visualize objects is created by a constant interaction of light bodies; we are not looking at the Sun itself; instead, we are surrounded by the moving fabric of the Sun's light body which conveys all the visual information. Consequently, if the passing light body is bent sideways, in addition to the bending downwards, the Sun appears to be circling. This is exactly how the circular movements of Sun, Moon, planets, and stars come about - it's not the luminaries revolving; it's their sideways bent light bodies which create the illusion of a circular motion. All luminaries and stars move from east to west in a straight line.

The Observable Cosmos and the Hidden

Flights work on the UTM map just as well as on the globe. Flight routes, when projected from the globe onto the UTM map, show a similar length in both systems, which makes it hard to tell, even for pilots, whether they are moving over a globe or traversing the flat UTM grid. However, there are flights which seem to defy the flat grid and apparently confirm the globe model. Such flights are, for example, between Dubai and San Francisco, which are 20 hours long, while the distance they would have to cover on the grid would amount to about 30 000 km. Obviously, the distance exceeds the flight duration by far and makes the flight appear impossible on the grid, and at the same time it seems to harmonize with globe. At this point, we need to keep in mind that the Earth is an advanced enclosed system which is meant to imitate a globe in all of its aspects so we don't have the sensation of being in giant facility with walls; instead, we have the impression of being on a sphere surrounded by a celestial sphere. Our visible universe, including the motions of celestial bodies, is designed to have the optical an mathematical characteristics of a spherical Earth being encircled by stars, Moon, Sun, and planets. And the nearly perfect illusion is provided by curved light, repetitive space, foundations of the Earth, and by the Foundations of Heaven, which all combined gives us the impression of not being in an enclosed system, but to be on a sphere surrounded by a vast and unbounded space, which most of us would pick over the sensation of being in a huge, rectangular room with two lamps shooting across the ceiling every twenty four hours. Not only that - the calculations for the orbital movements of the celestial bodies are in accordance with the round Earth model. All planets and their movements match their heliocentrically arranged orbits around the Sun perfectly, but there is one detail to be added - all the calculations and observations would still work flawlessly if we put the Earth in the center, and not the Sun. In this case, all luminaries, including the Sun, would apparently encircle the Earth. The Moon would have the the shortest cycle; the Sun would have the second shortest cycle etc., whereas the Earth would be a motionless sphere in the center. Nonetheless, if we place the Sun back in the center, like Copernicus did, all mathematics and observations will still work flawlessly - and this is where the lie of heliocentrism lies. Copernicus abolished the existing geocentric model, which has the Earth in the center, and put the Sun, one of the luminaries, in the center instead, so that the Earth would occupy one of the orbits of the luminaries and no longer be the center of the universe. Notice that this was done in the 16th century, long before NASA shot their famous picture of the heliocentric round Earth. In the days of Copernicus, there was no argument nor any need for a substitute of the geocentric model with the heliocentric other that to impose the ancient Sun worship, which seems to be pretty much alive in masonic circles, in Catholicism, and among Jesuits.

The traditional flat Earth belief rejects heliocentrism and the round Earth, and dismisses it as a hoax made up by the powers that be in order to fool the public. Though the latter might be true, it's still a baseless allegation that the spherical Earth was in contradiction with observable astronomy. There are billions of people, including astronomers, pilots, and cartographers, who do not see any contradiction between observable astronomy and the official round Earth model, be it geocentric or heliocentric, and genuinely approve its accuracy. Sure, we could refer to the fake space walks, the CGIs, and to Nasa's fake pictures to argue against the round Earth, but does the mere fact that there are no pictures of a round Earth, drawings and CGIs excluded, disprove the mathematical and observational utility of a spherical design of the Earth as it would be present in the heliocentric round Earth model? Absolutely not. The fact that no government was able to provide any authentic footage from space, or the fact that there are no satellites orbiting the earth merely proves that no one has been at altitudes the pictures are supposedly shot at, and that no one was abled to shoot satellites into "space". However, it does in no way disprove the well-known astronomy, which has been around for thousands of years.

The term "heliocentrism" can also be referred to the Sun-based arrangement of observable astronomy. All calculations for the movements of the celestial bodies and stars, which have been proven to be correct, work both ways - with the Earth being in center, and with the Sun being in the center. The key point is that observations and mathematics as we know them from heliocentrism are correct; the deception perpetrated by Copernicus consisted of two steps: In the first step, the Earth was removed from the center of Creation, and replaced with the Sun as the center of the universe. In the second step, the observable astronomy was imposed as the physical, whereas the duality between the physical and observable has been removed and erased from public consciousness. The crucial point is that there is an observable cosmos and a physical. Observable astronomy is the way we visualize the Sun, Moon, stars, and their orbits; physical astronomy is how the heavens actually move.

We know from scriptures that the Ancients believed in a geographic East and West, which seems to contradict the Copernican layout, yet the ancients could reconcile their belief in eastern and western ends of the Earth, and the idea that the heavens rest on foundations, with their observable astronomy. The propaganda machine of heliocentrism has been successful at spreading the rumor that the Bible was an ancient fairy book written by ignorant cavemen, but in reality, the Bible is one of the last remnants of the ancient civilizations which preserves accurate references to ancient cosmology and worldview. The cosmology of the ancient Hebrews is identical to the cosmology that was prevalent in ancient Egypt. Hebrews were part of the same ancient civilization until they segregated, and Moses was raised in the Pharaoh's palace, and studied in one of the mystery schools of Egypt. It is safe to say that the biblical Moses was part of the intellectual elite in ancient Egypt, the same ancient Egypt that fascinates and inspires researches and historians all over the world to this day.

"So Moses was educated in all the wisdom of the Egyptians and was powerful in his speech and actions. "

Acts 7 : 22

When we read verses like : "God divided the light from the darkness", "God divided the waters above from the waters below" or "He set the Earth on foundations", we can bet that any physics professor living during the time of the Egyptian civilization would be able to relate to these verses, and to interpret them from a scientific standpoint, since that was the "science" of the Ancients. So how come so many people admire the ancient Egyptian civilization, and search for artifacts and texts in order to get a little insight into the Egyptian worldview and cosmology, but at the same time manage to overlook the elephant in the room, namely, scriptures? Objectively speaking, the Bible is just as much of historical value as it is of theological. Please note that this is not coming from a biblical literalist. I'm a non denominational Christian who does not believe in every single word in the Bible being true. Nonetheless, when I started my journey in late 2014 / early 2015, I made the profound discovery that the Bible and apocrypha harbor deep scientific knowledge of universal value, beneficial for mankind in every single way.

From a theological point of view, it's irrelevant whether we choose the heliocentric layout with the Sun as the pivot point, or the geocentric with the Earth being the center of Creation, to calculate the movements of the heavens as long as we are aware of the duality between the physical and the observable. The Ancients, including the ancient Hebrews, were aware of the fact that the Earth is an artificial facility with ends, corners, and walls; and that there is a geographic East and West. They were also aware of light being curved, instead of linear; that space is repetitive; and that the Earth is thus created to be perceived as a sphere with the luminaries and stars revolving around it. The Bible and other scriptures refer to the physical model of the universe, not to the observable. The lack of understanding of the dual character of astronomy is the source of all modern misconceptions concerning ancient cosmology which is found in scriptures.

"And after that I saw the hidden and the visible path of the moon,... "

The Book Of Enoch 41 : 7

There is a hidden reality and a visible. We observe the visible paths of the celestial bodies, but we do not see the hidden, which is from east to west in a straight line. So what is the deception of our age? Did the Freemasons invent the heliocentric globe model and imposed it on the rest of the world, as the traditional flat Earth dogma dictates? Of course not. The deception lies in the cover up of the physical reality, and in the promotion of the visible cosmos as a substitute for the physical cosmos. The big hoax was to force the public into the acceptance of the illusion as physical reality. Unsurprisingly, the round Earth model enjoyed great success and acceptance from the general public. To this day, the Globe is accepted by billions of people around the world for its mathematical accuracy and consistency with observations and astronomical algorithms. However, the traditional flat Earth belief advocates the idea that the belief in a globe was pure ignorance and "cognitive dissonance", whereas the belief in a circular flat Earth with a dome was a manifestation of sheer open mindedness and "true knowledge". In actual reality, however, the globe model is embraced by the vast majority due to the fact that it is the observable part of the duality. Observable astronomy as we know it from the round Earth model, be it geocentric or heliocentric, is inseparable from the physical. If we are seriously determined to understand the shape of the Earth and the nature of reality, it's necessary to avoid denying, disfiguring, and remodeling of the observable astronomy as a means to force it into any particular "flat Earth model". The Earth does have two celestial poles; it does have a twenty four hours midnight Sun in the North, as well as in the South; it does have a horizon line limiting our view and many other visual characteristics of a globe, all while it's a flat, rectangular UTM plain. The same rectangular plane which is found throughout scriptures and dismissed as "outdated" according to the modern Copernican world view. We still live on the same rectangular flat plane with a geographic East and West as the ancient Egyptians did. The Earth was not magically turned into a globe by "scientists" in the 16th century.

The well-known astronomy, and be it heliocentric, is no way contradicting the concept of a rectangular flat Earth. The purpose of the square Earth concept is to raise awareness of the duality between the visible astronomy and the hidden. Unfortunately, the traditional circular Earth belief hit a different direction and rejects most of our observable astronomy, which creates a level of distrust and belittlement towards the flat Earth community, and towards the idea of a flat Earth in general.

We need be aware of the high probability that all contradictions and inconsistencies that the traditional flat Earth belief has to contend with may be a clever diversion induced by the same powers which have been advocating the globe since the 16th century. Is seems that the traditional Zetetic flat Earth model has no other purpose than to discredit the idea of a flat Earth, to drive a wedge between globe believers and flat Earth believers, and to suffocate the flat Earth movement in its inconsistencies with observable reality. Moreover, the staggering level of inconsistency with observable astronomy and cartography has the purpose to indirectly promote the globe as a working alternative. In fact, the circular flat Earth model represents the "chaos" part in the classic "Divide and Conquer" dialectic.

Southern celestial pole : IGNORED
Suns straight path on the equinox : IGNORED
Southern magnetic pole : IGNORED
Map distortions on the AE map : IGNORED
Antarctic midnight sun : DENIED
Coordinate system amd navigation : IGNORED
Time Zones : IGNORED
Straight celestial equator : IGNORED
Sunrise and sunset : PERSPECTIVE
Sun dials do not work on the AE map : NASA shill
Straight sun shadows on the equator on equinoxes : IGNORED

The good thing is that the inconsistencies and contradiction which have been haunting the artificial traditional circular flat Earth belief do not apply to the UTM Earth concept. The rectangular Earth concept assumes a rethink of assumptions and false allegations concerning "the globe", which have become a tradition within the circular Earth community. The only constructive way to understanding the mechanics and anatomy is through a thorough and objective analysis and reinterpretation of observable astronomy, based on facts, observations, and comprehensible arguments. It is also to be noted that an objective analysis does not assume an exclusively religious approach based on literalism alone (biblical, quranic). It is also necessary to avoid incoherent and misleading arguments, such as references to "clues" and "hidden messages" in movies", since that creates a platform for disinformation. A claim must be consistent with observations, facts, and with what is generally known as common sense, not with "clues in movies", drawings, and verses. Technically, one could claim that the Earth is a triangle resting on the backs of penguins; then, cherry-pick some useful verses in scripture, rip them out of context, twist them a couple of times until they eventually match your agenda and voila - a new "biblical revelation" is born. Same with "clues" - do you think there are no "clues" and "hidden messages" which could not be interpreted as references to a triangular shape of the Earth? And that is the risk of using verses, "clues", and

"pictures" as arguments - it creates a platform for disinformation and deception. Moreover, it creates fertile ground for intellectual dishonesty. The common platform in the world of research is facts, observations, and a coherent, fact-based argumentation; any other approach has proven itself to be counter-productive.

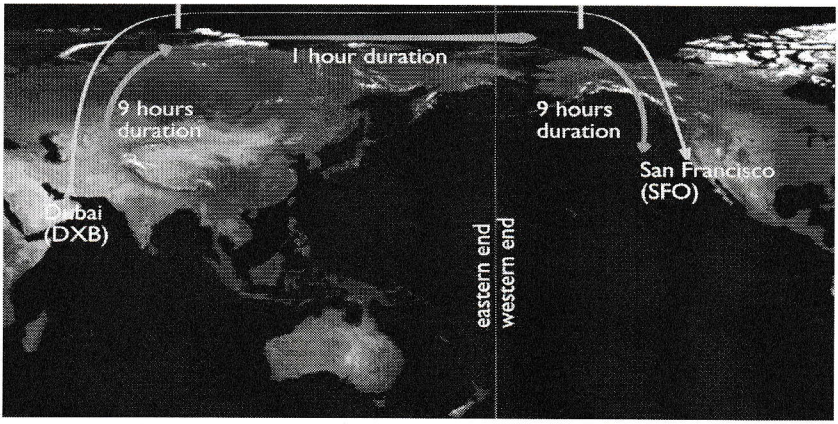
Northern and Southern Portal Systems

"Earth is a realm, it is not a planet. It is not an object, therefore, it has no edge*. Earth would be more easily defined as a system environment. Earth is also a machine, it is a Tesla coil. The sun and moon are powered wirelessly with the electromagnetic field (the Aether). This field also suspends the celestial spheres with electo-magnetic levitation. Electromagnetic levitation disproves gravity because the only force you need to counter is the electromagnetic force, not gravity. The stars are attached to the firmament."*

Nicola Tesla

The Earth is an enclosed system which has ends, walls, and corners. The question is, Do we have access to these walls? Can we go to the extreme North or South and see the Foundations of Heaven for ourselves? Fact is, no one ever reported to have found the "edge" of the world nor any walls. Today's aviation has traversed the sky from East to West and from North to South without anyone involved having the slightest reason to believe the Earth were surrounded by walls. But how is it possible? The answer is hidden in the spherical design of the Earth. It is unrealistic to assume that the spherical design would extend to astronomy and perspective alone, while omitting space itself. The reason why no one, including pilots, has ever found the edge is because the duality between the physical and perceptible also extends to the way we perceive space in general. In other words - traversing our flat, rectangular plane, we have the illusion of traveling on a sphere. This applies to east-west travel, and to north-south travel. We do not have access to the foundations located in the extreme North and South, since they are not included in the spherical design. So how exactly does the illusion of roundness extend to space itself? Like we already know, space is an endless east-west continuum; that perfectly harmonizes with the continuity of a sphere. But aside from the east- west loop, there is also north-south travel which imitates the spherical design. Note that north-south travel does not assume north-south circumnavigation. Please memorize that the square Earth concept does not include a north-south loop.

However, airplanes constantly traverse the far northern and far southern areas of the UTM plain. Nothing special about that so far, but there is a peculiarity about some of the flights which deserves special attention.



Pic.9

The picture 9 depicts the flight route from Dubai to San Francisco. The route is divided into three sections. What is striking about this route is the disproportional distribution of flight duration along the route. If we track the flight via one of the online flight radars, we will see the airplane commencing its journey in Dubai, moving north at a constant speed, traversing Russia and heading the extreme North. The first nine hours are depicted as the first section of the route. But then, something extraordinary happens - after the first nine hours of flight, the airplane disappears from the screen for about one hour, and reappears at the beginning of the third section, over North America. The middle section of the route amounts to a distance of well over ten thousand kilometers. The possibility that the airplane could cover such a great distance in that short period of time can be excluded. This route, when projected onto the globe, would be a straight shot over the North. If the Earth is not a sphere, and we know from the celestial equator that it's not, then how did the airplane cover the distance in one hour? Ladies and Gentlemen, what we are dealing with is another clever device to imitate the spherical design - aside from the east-west space-loop, the Earth is equipped with a portal system which stretches along the northern and southern perimeters of our realm. It's a well known fact that airlines never fly over the poles. Flight routes run a few degrees north and south of the actual poles. The reason why there are no flights or expeditions to latitudes 90° is because the portal system protects the Foundations of Heaven from access. In other words - the portals are a few degrees southern of the northern foundation, and a few degrees northern of the southern foundation, making it impossible to reach the physical foundations situated along the latitudes 90°. The portal system is another clever installation to create the illusion of being on a sphere, to fence the public off the Foundations of Heaven, and to protect the Foundations of Heaven from all external influences.

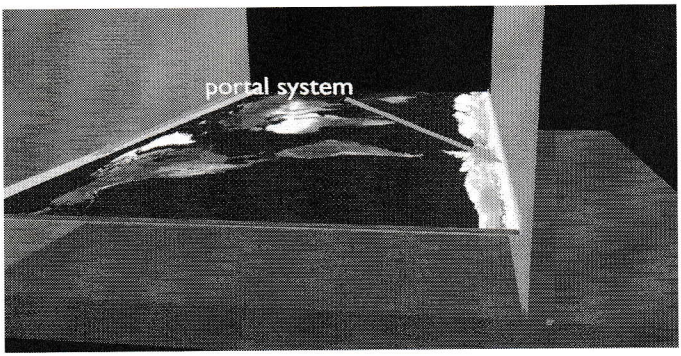
Pic.10 : portal system along the northern perimeter

One of the functions of the portal system is to mimic the continuity of the sphere. Whether it's east-west travel or north-south travel, the surface of the rectangular Earth mimics the surface of a sphere either way. For example, when we plot a route from Central Asia to Northern America on a globe, we connect the two destinations with a straight line running over the extreme North. Afterwards, we can actually travel the same route on the rectangle, while following the coordinates which the route covers on the globe. We would get to our destination without having the slightest suspect of having traversed a flat, rectangular plane, passing through a portal system.



Another purpose of the portal system is to shield the Foundations of Heaven from access and intervention, as well as from the oceans and other external influences. The main purpose of the foundations is to provide frequencies for the realms, to create the firmaments, and to bend the light bodies of the celestial bodies and stars thus creating the apparent circular orbits. They do not serve trivial functions, such as holding the oceans in place etc, which is the function of the portal system. The foundations are not in contact with the oceans.

SUMMARY : The Eoundations of Heaven represent two walls stretching along the latitudes 90° in the North and in the South. Their main function is to provide vibration of different frequencies, also referred to as "winds". The Foundations of Heaven create firm layers, also known as firmaments, by creating layers of vibration. The Earth is supported by a firm layer created by the Foundations of Heaven. However, we cannot travel to the latitudes 90°, since the extreme northern and southern latitudes are equipped with a portal system which mimics the continuity of the sphere when traveling north-south.
